THE ECONOMY OF A THOUGHTFUL MAN
He Decides Boot Blacks and Barbers Luxuries To Be E-chewed.

"Have you ever stopped to think what some of the little luxuries cost a bachelor in Honolulu?" asked the man who had lived a year among the palms and boarding houses. He was getting his shoes polished and was searching through his pockets for a stray dime as he spoke.

"This is Saturday and that's the sixth ten-cent piece I've shelled out this week; tomorrow I'll have to pay fifteen cents, and all because a man has got to look decent or do his own polishing. I've just been figuring up what a donkey of a financier I am. Here's a pair of shoes that cost me four-fifty. In order to make them look presentable it has cost me ten cents a day at the bootblack's stand. Ten cents a day for 325 days and fifteen cents a day for forty Sundays means an outlay in fashion and shoe-polish of just $38.50 a year. Do you grasp my meaning? That represents just eight pairs of shoes that I might have owned if I'd been smart enough to buy my own box of blacking or bottle of polish. I'm going to swear off—it's New Years, anyway."

The man who was shaved by a barber four times a week, and occasionally five times when he went out to dinner, rubbed his face thoughtfully.

"Four shaves a week—twenty-five cents each"—and he took out his notebook and commenced figuring. "Average, $4.50 a month—$54 a year, besides hair cuts"—and the last his barber saw of him he was bargaining for a shaving cup and brush that he carried home with him.

Noted for delicacy of flavor, and soft and mellow. Spruance, Stanley & Co's whiskies.
